

SHOULDN'T THIS BE EASY?

We all want it, but for many of us, the realization that "love is not enough" has left us with little or no power in creating a great relationship. Often, "real life" seems to get in the way. Time is scarce, pressures mount, people and things change. The vast majority of people honestly want their relationships to be great. They say that their relationship / family are the most important things in their lives, but try as they might, true partnership remains elusive.

So what stops us?

Sorting out what to do, what to say, what makes a difference is difficult – and no one gets it right all the time.

This program is for those committed to and willing to take on the challenge of creating a passionate, purposeful partnership. Now, for the first time, we are offering a course that provides a clear understanding and experience of what true partnership is and a process for making it your own in words and deeds.

DAVID ZELMAN, PH.D.

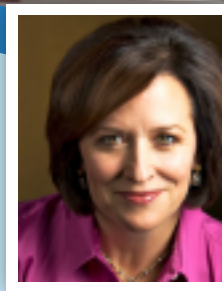

David's career as a psychotherapist began shortly after receiving his PhD from the University of Wisconsin in 1976. By 1984 he expanded his practice to include coaching and developing executives in Fortune 500 companies such as American Airlines, Texas Instruments, JP Morgan Chase as well as many smaller companies.

Dr. Zelman's sensitivity to both business and quality of life issues led to the founding of the Transitions institute and the development of several powerful programs including; "EXTRAORDINARY RELATIONSHIPS and "HAVING IT ALL - PROFESSIONAL SUCCESS AND PERSONAL HAPPINESS"

Among David's clients are many women who chose to step back from their own career to start a family and others who created a gratifying way to balance family and career.

David and his wife Karen have been married for over 30 years. They have three wonderful children. "I love my wife, I love my life! The source of our family's strength and happiness is in large measure a reflection of the quality of our partnership."

LORI DARLEY

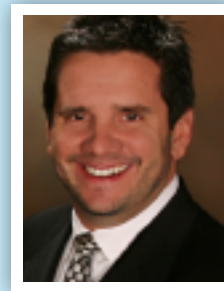

Lori Darley met the love of her life, later in life and for the last seventeen years, her partnership with Larry Leon has inspired her to create a future she never dared imagine. Lori's youth was defined by her passion for dance. Classically trained in Ballet, Lori received both her BFA and MFA from SMU. For twenty years she served as Artistic Director for a professional modern dance company.

After a rich and fulfilling career as a leader in the arts, Lori faced a difficult challenge most dancers eventually face. What's next? She enrolled in David Zelman's Transitions program. Digging deep and with tremendous support from her husband, Lori tapped into her desire to make a positive difference in people's lives. Thus began her coach training at the Transitions Institute which eventually led to the founding of her business, The Transitions Coach.

For the last twelve years, Lori has worked with individuals, entrepreneurs, and Fortune 500 companies in creating extraordinary results and building effective relationships. Her relationship with her husband continues to deepen and sweeten as she has put all she has learned to its best and highest use in her marriage. She is currently completing her book, Dancing Naked: Stepping into Freedom.

JOHN CORNELSEN

John Cornelsen began a remarkable transformation in the summer of 2002. Five years later, he fulfilled his dream of being the first college graduate in his family, earning a BSBA from the University of Phoenix. After a career with two employers in 22 years, in 2009 he became a founding partner of Evolving Texas, a successful civil engineering firm in Fort Worth, Texas.

John says the most important key to his success is support from his partner, Adrienne. Their friendship flourished in 2003, and they were married in 2006. "The most important thing she taught me is ANYTHING really is possible." John has three beautiful daughters: Chelsea, Michaela, and Makenzie.

John has worked extensively with Entrepreneur's Organization Forums, with a focus on group dynamics and retreat facilitation. In 2011 he became a certified Forum 2.0 Facilitator, and actively supports forums throughout the U.S. He is passionate about the power of retreats, and loves working with groups to create unexpected transformation. John is the chair of the Entrepreneur's Organization Global Spousal Forum Committee.

John shares his message of possibility with everyone he meets. He is designing a workbook for release in the summer of 2012. He believes that "not only can you have any life you choose, you will" and if he can help enough people choose with intention, he can change the world.
