

MAKING WORK PLAY

BUSINESS SUCCESS THROUGH COMEDY

With Dean Lewis, Emmy-Award winning comedy writer & Lori Darley, The Transitions Coach

Whether you think you're funny or not, discover the tools that comics use to think creatively and apply them to your unique business environment. Whether you're "I'm not funny at all" or "I'm always the life of the party", you will gain confidence, brush up on presentation skills and take productive risks as you laugh all the way to the bank!

Who's Leading the Workshop?

Dean Lewis is a headlining comedian who appears regularly at the Improv Comedy Club. He has appeared on Last Comic Standing, the Ellen Degeneres Show and he is the winner of the Wendy's Clean Comedy Challenge. Dean has also won an Emmy for writing in 2008. His workshop has been taught for over 12 years and graduates have gone on to appear on Showtime, Comedy Central and Conan.

"Dean's class not only allowed me to fulfill a dream that I've had for years-- and not in a "I went to rock star camp for a week" kind of way-- but in that if I do ever get to a point where I have the time and drive to get back into comedy, I feel that I have every tool I need to be successful.

Additionally, as a professional communicator, I was able to take what I've learned from Dean and use it to become an even better writer and speaker in the corporate world. I've never taken a corporate seminar or workshop that did as much for me as Dean's comedy workshop."

Lori Darley has spent over 25 years developing specialized training techniques to assist clients in reaching their highest levels of creative, physical, and interpersonal expression. Her multi-faceted career encompassing successful leadership roles in the arts, business and higher education led her to found her company, The Transitions Coach. Her unique approach recognizes the relevance of the body and movement in providing access to inspired business leadership -- aligning values and purpose with high performance execution.

What are people saying?

"Lori has a unique and highly creative approach to coaching. As both an artist and entrepreneur myself, it was important to me to work with a coach that had solid business sense as well as an innate understanding of the creative process. This is Lori Darley, to a tee. She has a remarkable gift of seeing solutions in profoundly creative and effective ways. My life's work and creative expression has been deeply enriched through working with her."
